Tom,
It has been a month and your client's tech people never contacted my people who I provided in the email below. Nor did you provide me with any contact information so that we could reach out. We are still unable to access the QB data.

I also have not heard from you about the additional loan information, which I first requested on September 16, 2024. I plan to go to the court on this if I have not received this information by next Friday, November 8.

Goodness, Cary, I was hoping that QB had finally worked for you.

Does your firm have an IT person that could communicate with my client's tech people? I have been going through in-house counsel, who have done their best but have no depth of knowledge.

Thanks.

Tom-

Can you please respond to us related to our inability to review the Quickbooks documents you sent as set forth below? When we try to review the documents in Quickbooks, using our account, it is still requiring a password from your client because it is their data. We need for you to provide a way for us to review this data, as it is currently unreviewable.

Also, we sent to you a letter on September 16, 2024 about additional documents that are responsive to our discovery requests that you have not produced related to loans made to Lindell Management. Please provide those documents as well. If you would like to meet and confer on these issues, I am available.

Thanks,
Cary

Mr. Miller:

We tried just now to access the QuickBooks documents using the link in your email right below. When we clicked on the link, the prompt shown in screenshot #1 came up. Once though we tried to access the actual documents after downloading them, we were again prompted to input your client's Username and Password – which obviously we don't know. It appears that we're either going to have to be provided with the documents in a way that is not password protected OR you're going to have to provide us with your client's Username and Password. Any help you can give us to get us unobstructed access to the QuickBooks documents would be greatly appreciated.

Cary my client and I have researched this and I don't think it's possible for me to buy a license for you. I can of course subsidize your purchase of it and it seems to be quite easy to do online. Let me know if you want my debit card numbers I'm happy to let you have them. there are so many links online that it's hard to know where to start but QuickBooks lays it all out pretty easily and it seems to verify that the online service works with our database although I have seen some comments to the effect that the locally installed software can produce more reports then can the online service.

So I have to kick this back to your desk. I don't think it's possible for me to assign a license to you so it's got to start from your end but again we undertake to finance any of your expenditures. Thanks

Tom,
 I am happy to try and see if having access to QuickBooks works. I have been told that if the version we use is not exactly the version that you have then the data may not be able to go back into the database properly. Please send me the information for the license once you have purchased it so that we can install it and see if it works.

The new link to Goldfynch worked. However, none of the documents produced contained the metadata we requested in our requests for production. I am going to see if we can use it anyway, but we may come back to ask for additional background data on the documents you produced. We also have not had a chance to actually review the documents yet so there may be additional follow up after we have had that opportunity.

Thanks,
 Cary

Thanks! We are having The Goldfinch link sent directly from the Goldfinch company. We have been able to open it on our side but I may have corrupted the formatting inadvertently when I sent it to you. With respect to QuickBooks we are running Excel runs for you but I tell you if you have QuickBooks itself you can do many many more reports basically both horizontal and vertical that I don't believe you can do in Excel at least not without sophisticated programming. We are looking into options. First of all I'm authorized to say that if you want to purchase the QuickBooks program we will pay for it. The best option by far may be to use the database with online QuickBooks that would not only be cheaper but wouldn't involve installation hassles. Do you have a thought as to how you want to approach the QuickBooks problem?

Tom,

The court has ordered us to file a letter tomorrow, Monday, Aug 26, reporting on the status of Lindell's responses to RFPs and production of documents. The link to the documents did not work. This is the message I get when I click the button:

Production invite not found.

We're sorry, we couldn't locate the production invitation you're looking for. It may be that the invite has expired (due to downloads or time limit) or has been revoked. You may want to check with the inviter to get a new invite link.

Unless I have a working link by 3:00ET on Monday, Aug. 26, I will have to report to the court that the required documents have not been produced.

Next, while the link to the Quickbooks documents seems to work, I have been unable to view these documents because I do not have Quickbooks. Sending a production with a proprietary software that requires licenses access is not "a reasonably useable format" as required under the rules. Please reproduce these files in Excel.

Unless I have these documents in Excel format by 3:00ET on Monday, Aug. 26, I will have to report to the court that the required documents have not been properly produced.
